> The assault was nearly successful. Cold fusion was almost killed off. Pons and Fleischmann were driven from the U.S. to France to a Japanese funded laboratory. Physicist after physicist claimed fraud and the media followed suit, down to the present day. Lack of funding and peer pressure combined to keep many scientists in ignorance, and even today success is not widely known. Around the world independent researchers took a second look. If they had no fund, they cannibalized other projects. A handful of researchers looked beyond the official screen and a few low-circulation journals, including FTIR (see last page), emerged and tracked the new work.

> Rewards are more than monetary. As Methernitha has insisted, there are sociological and spiritual aspects. And the losses are more than financial. These technologies will solve many of the world's intractable problems, without Big Government intervention. This is an almost risk free device with the attributes of a free good like water and air. Non-polluting, non-political, non-monopolizing. The developers will be more powerful than Governments and for this reason the Methernitha Community has up to recently declined publicity for their electrostatic over-unity device. It is difficult to comment on this approach. We are all young in understanding this new technology which is more than just cold fusion and over unity.
